Marionettes Will Again Perform in "Cinderella"

The Gods are coming back to us—the Gods that were here in May. Two magical days will they be with us—July 30th and 31st. Again will they create for us the sad and wondrous world of "Cinderella"—these Gods that go under the every-day names of "Kegg and Goldsmith."

Again will we see Fairy Godmother and her three little dancing elves transform this world for Cinderella.

And again will we "go to the Prince's Ball" and feel no surprise when Prince Charming himself loves Cinderella at sight, even as we did.

Again will we see Pixie the cat; Pixie who touched our hearts close, by the heart we felt beating in his alive little body; Pixie, with his insinuating affection for the sad Cinderella, with his philosophic yet tentative insistence upon dancing even though his heart cried within him for Cinderella's grief in that sad hour after the ball.

Oh but WE know, for we in the audience are Gods, too, in a way; we know that on the morrow the Prince himself is coming to Cinderella. We know that the slipper, the little golden slipper, is going to fit none other than the dainty foot of Cinderella. We know—and so can smile with Pixie's faith that all will end well, and so IS well.

Some people call this "Cinderella" a "Puppet Show"—how be it a wonderful puppet show. Well then, this "Puppet Show" we saw one afternoon in May at the Arts and Crafts Theatre. In the evening, of course, I went again. Who didn't? But this time, instead of seeing it from the back seat in "front," I saw it from a front seat back of the curtain. The Gods, the string-pullers, designer, sculptor, speaker of the "Word," did their allotted tasks with skill, neatly, expeditiously and withal "sympathetically," which is more than can be said of all gods.

Omniscient, omnipresent and omnipotent, it was a pretty thing to see this big four on the "bridge," leaning out from heaven, manipulating the destinies of the little humans below. I heard their tears, I saw their smiles, I listened while these "stars" sang together.

Each one, of course, had his own special human whose destiny he controlled, whose strings he usually held and manipulated. Can our gods be not quite so skillful at their job as these? But of that let us not speak.

When at the end of the performance, suddenly the huge person appeared, his stooped back all but hidden by the proscenium arch, and reaching down his great arm shook the hand of Cinderella, a single gasp of incredulity escaped from the startled audience. Our minds and our senses had become so at one with the actors, that they were consequently OUR size, some six feet, more or less, and when the creature appeared he was no less than an incredibly brawny and rotund, awful and benign giant. For the first time in our lives we really saw a giant. Thus the "illusion," from being destroyed, was, by the law of "relativity," accentuated.

Let us welcome this returning troup of versatile Gods; Fannie Goldsmith, the Speaker of the Word, who first said, "Let there be a play;" George Kegg, the designer and sculptor; Mable Kegg, wardrobe mistress and singing voice, and Miss Langly and Miss Gaddes, music makers and string-pullers all—"and there is a play." And again we may look at their world and say: "Behold it is very good."

Monday and Tuesday afternoon and evening, July 30th and 31st, at the Arts and Crafts Hall.

Carmel Longing

I miss the long blue sweeping swell
That laps the beach where Lobos lies;
The soft-arched pines that are Carmel—
Their green against the blue, bine skies.

I long for grasses, yellow-starred,
In patterns on the shifting dunes,
And that dim beat of surf drummed hard
That weaves beneath the bird-song tunes.

Bright sun, soft fog, bright sun again
In peace upon the gnarled old trees
Seem balm and comfort to the pain
Of life's unfathomed mysteries.

So I will walk your woods once more,
Carmel of sun and fog and spray,
And let the beauty of your shore
Make up for barren yesterday!

Benefit Dance for Humane Society

The Carmel Humane Society is to give a benefit dance and bridge party on Wednesday, August 8, in Arts and Crafts Hall. Moffat will furnish the music.

The dance will begin at 9. Tables for bridge will be on the stage and ready at 8 o'clock.

This will be a delightful event for a very worthy cause.

Mrs. John McEwen of Oakland is visiting with Mrs. Lotta Shipley. Her husband is a member of the Johnson Locke shipping firm.

Carmel's Circus Postponed One Week

The executive committee having in charge the big Carmel Circus has postponed the event to Saturday, August 11, owing to the absence of some of the principals and because the date first selected followed too closely the Forest Theater production "The Cradle."

One of the big features of Circus Day is the race program that starts at 10 o'clock August 4. There will be races and contests of all kinds; races for the kiddies, balloon race, motorcycle race, bicycle races, automobile obstacle race, firemen's hose race, and several added attractions—a barrel of fun for everyone. Don's miss it.

"The Cradle," is Delicately-Woven Crusade Romance

"The Cradle" is described by its author as "a thirteenth century tapestry in three strips of arras." The image is a good one. Tapestry—woven breadths of faded colors that once were bright, of archaic forms that once meant life of man and beast. By trick of candle light the colors gleam once more; at the hand of the wind the arras sways, the stage seem to leap, the stately ladies to bend—life comes again.

So in this play old days the three strips of arras will move with a wind of life and the forgotten voices will sound once more. Saint Francis weaves praises, the brothers crack their guileless jokes, and the "little [illegible] into the inn at Gelon to have their faces washed. The juggler tosses his balls, the peasants gape at the great Cardinal who has come among them, the prince fights hard for his willful way, and the girl nun Chiara, in a still white flame of exaltation puts away the thought of earthly love. Saint and child, prince and peasant, they moved once on the Umbrian hillside, and now, woven into the tapestry of words, they rise before us

In the manuscript, each act is closed, after the curtain speech, with a picturesque line which the author calls "the fringe of the arras." After the first act, in which Chiara has repulsed the prince, and he, with a sudden change of mood, has turned to follow the small crusaders, we read, "Bereft of human passions, the little garden lies quiet at sunset."

In the second act the prince changes clothes with his double, the juggler, and packs the latter off to Germany with the cardinal, so that he himself, may stay to continue his pursuit of Chiara. She, with her flaming heart of devotion, kneels in candle light to pray—

Thou and I, O Christ . . .
Must keep him forever
Out of Assisi.

And the arras fringe reads, "Night fall, feeding many hungers at her quiet breast."

At the last, when the children are safe with Francis, bound for the simple duties of home, and Chiara's spirit has conquered, and the prince, grown a man at last, has accepted his responsibilities, Quidnunc the fool, to whom are given the best lines in the play, remarks, "We fools owe our salvation to the fact that we neither trouble the infidels on the one hand nor the little brides of Christ on the other. How wise then are fools, of whom I am a respectable example."

Here the wind is still, the candle dies out, the colors fade, the tapestry hangs moveless. The play is done.

The Carmel Pine Cone issued a special edition of sixteen pages on the occasion of the Annual Forest Theater production at Carmel-by-the-Sea. Editor W. L. Overstreet, who plays a prominent role in the production, is to be congratulated on the artistic standard he has attained in this edition, which faithfully interprets the spirit of the famed art colony.—Exchange.

"MERTON" POORLY RECEIVED

The following is from the Paris edition of the New York Herald:

"Fresh from a long run in Broadway, "Merton of the Movies" was poorly received by a London audience at the Shaftesbury Theater tonight, and after a few curtain calls at the end of the last act the orchestra mercifully struck up "God Save The King" and saved Tom Douglas, the clever youngster in the title part, from a chorus of boos from the gallery.

The play, though entertaining and interesting for revelations it gives of movie life, dragged throughout the first three acts, and a mediocre fourth could not save it. It had the poorest reception given any American piece in the last few months."

Permanently disabled by flying as a result of a plane crash at Eastbourne on the English Channel in 1918, Louis Leon DeJean, former student of the University of California, is living in Mill Valley, has turned his interest to poetry in which he has gained fame as the Robert Service of the Air. When the war broke out DeJean joined the Royal Flying Corps and saw active service until his crash in 1918. Unable to attribute his services to the advancement of aviation by flying, he has turned to the pen.

A gallery of ancient and modern art, offering an unusual opportunity for instructive comparison between the methods of the old masters and the new, has just been arranged in the San Francisco Museum of Art in the Palace of Fine Arts, by Director Ladrvik. How far the modern point of view has departed from the austere simplicity of the early European Primitives is strikingly revealed in the XVI century Hungarian primitive of "St. Luke Writing the Gospel" and the XVII century Netherlandish primitive of "Christ in the Temple," which has been presented to the permanent collection by Mrs. George A. Pope, the wife of the president of the museum.

"LAMENT" WINS $6,000 PRIZE

Miss Erna Lange of Elizabeth, N. J., has been awarded the 1923 John Armstrong Chaloner Paris prize of $6,000, obtaining the honor on the strength of general artistic ability and her mural decoration "Lament," painted especially for the competition. This prize, to be paid in installments of $1,200 over a period of five years, is to be used for the purpose of study abroad, the first two years of which must be spent in Paris. The original prize as founded by John Armstrong Chaloner in 1920, through subscriptions obtained from American art patrons, endowed the winner through a period of five years with the sum of $900. Owing to the increased cost of living this prize awarded every two years has been increased to the sum of $1,200, all art students under the age of 30 being eligible for the competition. Miss Lange, who confesses to the age of 26, is a graduate of the Elizabeth High School and has spent [illegible] studying art, having been a student in the National Academy of Design, Cooper Union, and the Art Students League.

The house in which Sarah Bernhardt lived and died has become a shrine for American lovers of the art of the great French actress. Sight seeing busses include Boulevarde Pariere in their itineraries, and upon approaching the number 56 the guides call out in hushed voices, "That is where the 'Divine Sarah' breathed her last." Madame Bernhardt's simple tomb in the Cemetery Pere Lachaise also is visited daily by scores of former admirers of the actress. Never since the body was placed there has the tomb been devoid of fresh flowers.

The movement launched for the establishment of a Mark Twain memorial park at Florida, Mo., birthplace of the famous author and humorist, was indorsed by President Harding in a letter received by H. J. Blanton, president of the association promoting the park as a literary shrine for the entire nation.

Search for Lost Young Girl Ends

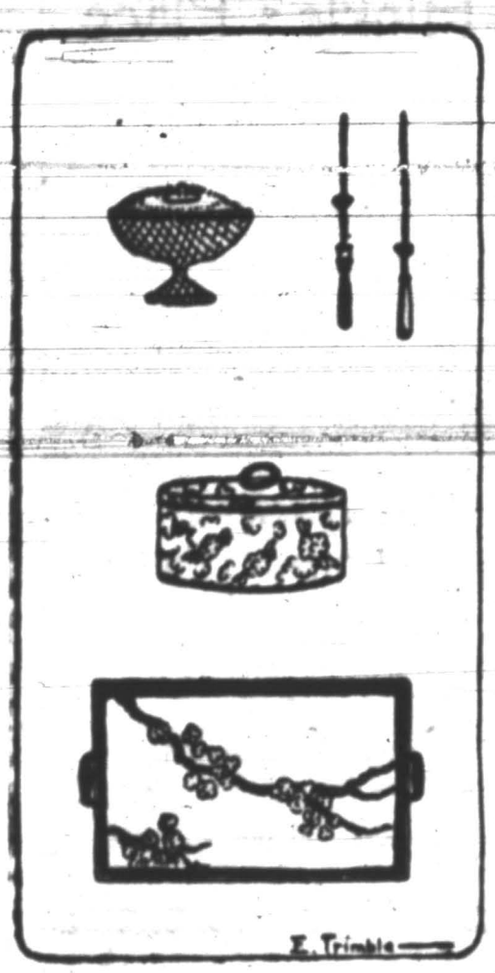
Three days and two nights of forebodings and anxiety, searching and communicating came to an end at 8 o'clock Wednesday evening when the church bells announced the glad tidings that Ruth Cator, fourteen-year-old daughter of Mr and Mrs. Thomas V. Cator, who mysteriously disappeared Monday morning, had been found, alive but nearly starved.

While ill the child left her home and wandered about the city and when tired out sought rest in the basement of a cottage on the southwest corner of Monte Verde and Seventh streets.

She fell asleep, and when she awoke found the basement door locked—by the departing tenant. She was unable to get out. Finally, after many hours, she broke a window. The falling glass attracted the notice of neighbors, and the search was at an end.

Mr. and Mrs. Cator are very grateful for every assistance rendered, and have asked the Pine Cone to extend hearty thanks to all.

PICTURE FRAMES MAKE GOOD TRAYS



A plain picture frame painted or stained and fitted with handles makes a lovely tray, if one has a piece of Chinese embroidery brocade or a quaint old print to put underneath the glass. A coffee can covered with tapestry or cretonne edged with gold braid and topped with a colored glass ring for a handle forms an attractive cake or candy box. The powder dish is made of a grapefruit glass covered with gold net. The curtain pulls are easily made.

Carmel-by-the-Sea has grown beyond all predictions of a few years ago.
And prices have kept step with that growth.

Carmel-by-the-Sea is growing faster today than ever before.
If you could purchase property today in Carmel-by-the-Sea at prices of a few years ago, you would hesitate before overlooking that opportunity.

you are offered the opportunity of buying Carmel property at "old prices." Suitable available land for subdivision in Carmel is about exhausted. The opportunity offered today may not occur again.

CARMEL WOODS

is the ninth addition to the constantly growing town of Carmel-by-the-Sea, the most celebrated center of art and letters on the Pacific Coast.

CARMEL WOODS is in the heart of the Monterey Peninsula, touching Carmel-by-the-Sea on one side and Pebble Beach on the other. Magnificent pines and oaks and luxuriant undergrowth make Carmel Woods a region of native loveliness, admirably adapted for the homes of those who love nature and find in the healthful climate, the romantic mission history and the cultured atmosphere of Carmel-by-the-Sea their ideal of a permanent dwelling place.

CARMEL WOODS is a residence subdivision, with reasonable restrictions recommended by the town trustees and town planning commission of Carmel-by-the-Sea. These restrictions are designed to assure every purchaser a congenial environment.

CARMEL WOODS is traversed by roads that wind through the pines and oaks, opening up vistas of irresistible charm, making the homesites accessible, and at the same time emphasizing the note of seclusion so dear to those who seek homes on the Monterey Peninsula. These roads are all forty feet wide and for twenty feet of their width they are surfaced and graveled.

Water in abundance and electricity have been brought to every homesite.

Individual lots can be purchased for as little as $350.00
Reasonable terms if desired.

Law Regulating Garages Rental

The new motor vehicle act which goes into effect on August 31, contains certain passages adding new duties to the owners of private and public garages. Under the provisions of the new act, all owners of private garages who rent such garages must file within 24 hours a report of such rental with the police if the garage is in the city or with the sheriff if it is in the county, containing a description of the motor vehicle stored there, including the name, license and motor number.

Owners of public garages shall keep a written record of all motor vehicles stored with them for compensation for a period longer than 12 hours. Such report shall contain the name and address of the person storing the vehicle, together with a brief description of the vehicle. Such reports shall be open to inspection by any peace officer.

For complete information the sheriff refers all persons affected by the above mentioned data to sections 56 and 57 of the motor vehicle act.

Strange Experience.

Many years ago, while living in a certain western city, our neighbors were aroused one night by a burglar entering their bedroom window. He demanded $300, and after receiving it, sat in the window and chatted with the man while his frantic wife sat in bed, speechless. Just before leaving he said that in three years he would return the money. He then jumped out of the window and disappeared into darkness. Three years passed and the money was returned.—Chicago Journal.

NEW YORK FALLS FOR ANYTHING

New York, a correspondent writes, is "still in the grip of the Russian craze," and it gives promise of lasting for another winter. He does not refer to Bolshevism, but to the arts.

The Moscow Art Theater Company has gone back home, but its example remains. Russian music is popular. The craze for Russian dancing persists. Russian decoration is shown not only on the stage but throughout many theaters, restaurants and clubs.

Some of that art is doubtless good, judged by any dependable standard. Much is wild, barbaric and exotic, stirring strange emotions and thoughts in the mind of a non-Russian. Is that to be mingled with our own life hereafter, subtly changing our tastes and moods? Or is it a passing fad?

The correspondent thinks the latter. And what New York's next craze will be he is unable to predict. Some day, he says, the metropolis may develop a craze for things American. But of that he has his doubts. So have the rest of us.

A FITTING MEMORIAL

The act of a pioneer family of Humboldt county, California, in deeding to the state a valuable tract of primeval redwood forest to stand as a memorial to Humboldt county's pioneers is indeed appropriate. Mrs. Zipporah Russ, who herself crossed the plains in 1853, has given 166 acres of wonderful timber land on the state highway near Orick, California, in memory of her husband, Joseph Russ, a pioneer of 1852, and also as a memorial to all the pioneers of Humboldt county. The grove will be known as the Humboldt County Pioneer Memorialsand will be dedicated to use as a public park.

These giant trees, the Sequoia sempervirens, or redwoods, were ages old when California's first pioneers arrived. They had for centuries been objects of reverence and wonder among the Indians who inhabited these shores. Some of the very trees now standing in the Russ Pioneer Memorial Grove were practically as they are today in size and girth when Columbus discovered America, and when Sir Francis Drake sighted the shores of California. Some of these trees were saplings at the time of the birth of Christ.

The gift of this grove comes as the result of the work of the Save the Redwoods League, which for several years past has been active in securing through state, county and private aid the preservation of an adequate tract of our primeval redwood forest, one of the unique and priceless possessions of California. It is to be hoped that the example set by this pioneer memorial will be followed in the establishment of many such public redwood groves.—San Jose News.
